Mrs. Calbraith P. Rogers, wife of the aviator who was killed in 1912 at Long Beach, Cal., and who is herself an aviator, is a Bennington girl and is now visiting relatives in that place. She often makes flights and says there is no sensation so thrilling, no sport so fascinating. She asserts the real cause of her husband's death was a sea gull. Turning his aeroplane to make a landing, Rogers ran into a flock of sea gulls which were following the machine, and one became wedged in the vertical rudder. He tried to work it out and in doing so broke the control wires, which made the machine unmanageable, causing the aeroplane to descend rapidly.
